Course Webpage: Class Brightspace page

Class times: Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10:30pm – 11:45pm; PSYC 3187. Tuesdays are for open discussion of how to write papers, how to improve writing, how to come up with thesis ideas, how to interpret and learn from my feedback, etc. After our first Tuesday meeting, we may opt to do Tuesday meetings on Zoom, depending on class vote.

Office hours: Wednesdays: 11am– 12noon or by appointment (please let me know if you plan to visit).

Films and Readings: There is no textbook; assigned readings will be available on our class Brightspace at least one week before your paper is due. Films will be listed; you are to view the films on your own time during the week that they are assigned. Contact Dr. Williams if you have difficulty accessing films.

Course Description

In this course, we examine theory and research in experimental social psychology and use popular (and some that are not so popular) films to assist in provoking thought and analysis of the theory and research.

Aims. This course is different from most. I'm not interested in how well you remember material, but I am interested in how well you think and in how well you articulate your ideas. This is primarily a writing class, in which you will be asked to write short (500-word maximum) thought papers each week. These thought papers would use the film as a vehicle to formulate ideas from the reading. I am looking for creative ideas that extend, contradict, or provide boundary conditions to the theories/hypotheses used in the reading. I am looking for well-constructed papers that are focused on a single thesis and provide supportive arguments for the thesis in the subsequent paragraphs. Each paragraph should tightly pertain to an argument in support of the thesis.

Structure. Each week, readings (journal articles, chapters) will be assigned. We will view a film that has some conceptual relation to the reading topic. Your thought paper, due at 4pm on Wednesdays, the day before Thursday's class meeting, should be submitted to me as a word document (.doc or .docx) through Brightspace. Your paper should support a thesis of your choice (I will be giving you advice as to how to write your papers).

These papers can be no longer than 500 words in length. Late papers will not be accepted. You will receive feedback and a score for each paper (0-10) by class time, where we will discuss the papers and the film. New readings will be assigned, another film viewed, and so on.

How to submit your papers.

Submit through Brightspace. When you submit your papers (as a Word.doc or Word.docx), please name your document in the following way:

yourlastname-Paper #

Example: Smith-Paper 1

Grading. I will grade each paper from 1 (unacceptable) to 10 (excellent). Typically, the grades usually run between 6 - 9.5 points, although there have been exceptions. Although fourteen (14) papers and films will be assigned, only your top ten (10) papers will be used for grading purposes. Whether you write the paper or not, you are expected to read the assigned paper(s), view the film, and take part in the discussion. Class participation is considered for grading. Course marks will be based on the ten papers (80% of your grade), and attendance/class participation (20% of your grade).

Purdue's standard grading policy will be used to assign final letter grades:

100 – 93% of top score achieved	=	A
92 – 90% of top score achieved	=	A-
89 – 87% of top score achieved	=	B+
86 - 83% of top score achieved	=	B
82 - 80% of top score achieved	=	B-
79 – 77% of top score achieved	=	C+
76 – 73% of top score achieved	=	C
72 – 70% of top score achieved	=	C-
69 - 67% of top score achieved	=	D+
66 – 63% of top score achieved	=	D
62 – 60% of top score achieved	=	D-
< 60% of top score achieved	=	F

Absences and missed papers. If you contact me prior to an absence which is the result of a verifiable emergency or illness, then you can make up the absence by handing in a paper with comments you wanted to make during discussion (and I will grade these). Because you can choose your top 10 papers, missed papers will simply count as zeros.

Academic Honesty: For your own sake, do your own work. Plagiarism is a serious offense, and is easily detectable with search engines. It does not matter if you plagiarized intentionally or unintentionally—either way it is plagiarism. I check each paper with plagiarism detection software. I have on file all previous papers turned in for this class.

Purdue Student Code of Honor: Know it and follow it. Do your own work. Plagiarism is a serious offense, and is easily detectable with the advent of search engines. It does not matter if you plagiarized intentionally or unintentionally—either way it is plagiarism. Here is a useful website to understand the definition and issues surrounding plagiarism:

- To report an emergency, call 911. To obtain updates regarding an ongoing emergency, sign up for Purdue Alert text messages, view www.purdue.edu/ea.
- There are nearly 300 Emergency Telephones outdoors across campus and in parking garages that connect directly to the Purdue University Police Department. If you feel threatened or need help, push the button and you will be connected immediately.
- If we hear a fire alarm during class we will immediately suspend class, evacuate the building, and proceed outdoors. Do not use the elevator.
- If we are notified during class of a Shelter in Place requirement for a tornado warning, we will suspend class and shelter in the basement.
- If we are notified during class of a Shelter in Place requirement for a hazardous materials release, or a civil disturbance, including a shooting or other use of weapons, we will suspend class and shelter in the classroom, shutting the door and turning off the lights.
- Please review the Emergency Preparedness website for additional information.

How to Write Your 2-Page Thought Papers

I realize that 500 words may seem unreasonably restricting to you, preventing you from adequately expressing your ideas. In scientific journals, psychology included, writing is necessarily concise. Specific page restrictions are enforced. If we go over the word limits when we submit an article, it is rejected without review. Redundancy, flowery writing, and ambiguity are to be edited out. This is a difficult exercise. Your first draft for each paper will probably be 3-4 pages long (double-spaced), so your subsequent draft(s) will involve editing your paper down to size. (If, on the other hand, you're having a difficult time coming up with 500 words, then you may not be putting enough thought into your thought papers).

You will then go through a thorough editing stage. Ask yourself these questions: Is this sentence necessary? Is this word necessary? Can I combine these two sentences? Am I straying from my main thesis? Did I ever say "in other words?" If so, then write it correctly the first time so you don't have to repeat yourself.

Some students need an introductory sentence or two to get the ball rolling, but these sentences can often be discarded before submitting the final draft.

Often students talk about more than one thesis, which always results in a lower grade. There is not enough space to write and defend more than one thesis within the 500-word limit. Choose your most provocative and well-argued thesis, and use the entire paper to elaborate upon it.

The first thing I do is Tools>Word Count. If your paper is over 500 words, I strike-through all words after the 500th word, and I don't read these extra words. Seriously; I am not kidding. So, you should do a word count before submitting it, and make sure it is no more than 500 words.

Ten Additional Pieces of Advice

- 1) State your thesis early and explicitly. Just to be safe, underline or italicize it, so I know where it is.
- 2) Do not settle for a wishy-washy thesis. Be brave enough to take a stance and argue for it. Be explicit in how your thesis departs from the point(s) the authors are making. Avoid the obvious (i. e., this movie is a perfect example of this phenomenon; this movie is wrong because it is not consistent with the theory, etc.). I am looking for clever insights, particularly about the theory (or theories) and/or research (not so much about the film). One tip that will likely result in a good grade: Ask yourself, "under what conditions will the general hypothesis in the reading be different?" When will the pattern of results not emerge, or be the opposite, or more pronounced than that which the authors found?
- 3) Select a thesis with a narrow focus. It should be in some way an extension of the reading (not the movie). Critically analyze the reading. Take issue with the theory, the generalizations, or the way the idea was tested. Use the movie to help come up with your idea or to help illustrate your point.
- 4) Do not necessarily select a thesis that is the central focus of the movie or the reading. It could be a tangential issue that piqued your interest.
- 5) Support your thesis with persuasive arguments based upon examples from the reading and the movie.
- 6) Use each paragraph to make a point that will provide strength to your thesis. The point should be clear and the paragraph should be organized around it. Do not write a paragraph that drifts from one point to another to another. Just have one point per paragraph.
- 7) Avoid quotes, especially long ones. But, if you choose a (small) quote, you must provide the proper citation for it.
- 8) Define important or esoteric terms. Do not use jargon. Do not use acronyms (DNUA). Do not assume I know what you are talking about.
- 9) Remember that spelling, grammar, sentence structure and organization ARE important and figure into the grading.
- 10) Do not end your paper with a platitude. e.g. "If people stop being prejudiced, then the world would be a better place."
